

How To Remove Spilled Wax

If you accidentally spill some wax on your carpet while you and your fiancé are trying to have a romantic evening at home, don't panic! We have a quick and easy solution to remove the wax, without damaging the carpet. First you will need an iron and a cloth. If you don't want to dirty any rags, you can just use some old newspaper.

Once you have all necessary supplies, you want to set the iron to a low temperature. Place the rag or newspaper directly on the stain. Next, set the iron on top of the paper/cloth and slowly move it around in circles. The goal is to heat up the wax just enough to separate from the rug and stick onto your rag or newspaper.

The wax will transfer right onto the rag or newspaper. If you are using a newspaper, you will need to move the paper to a new dry spot every few minutes. This allows for the wax to continually be absorbed into the paper as it melts down. Without this motion, the wax could soak all the way through the paper and stick onto the iron. If there is a little bit of wax left on the rug, get a warm wet rag and rub the rest of it off.
